

There are two key observations that can be made from the above graph:

- The increase in throughput flattens out significantly once the number of concurrent requests gets to 20. A doubling of the number of concurrent requests only adds around a 10% increase in the throughput
- Throughput is most influenced by the EBS setting. In other words, (disk) IO performance is the most significant factor affecting throughput