

Noridian Healthcare Solutions (NHS)

Outsourcing and technology solutions for federal, state and commercial health care payors

When Medicare was introduced in the state of North Dakota in 1966, NHS worked behind the scenes to become one of the program's smoothest running administrative engines. When Maryland became the first state to build a health benefit exchange system, NHS' flexible solution was their choice.

In the years in between, NHS has been innovating in health care administration and outsourcing, and developing the technology to do it most effectively.

Today, through our core business, our sister companies and our vendor partners, NHS offers a broad set of proven solutions for federal, state and private clients. A partial list of services includes:
